

System for occipitospondylodesis with translaminar fixation consists of a cranial part of the system - a plate that is fixed to the occipital bone, an intermediate part of the system, and a vertebral part of the system - rods for spinal fixation. Device is constructed as a single unit, the rods for spinal fixation are rectangular in shape and are made with the possibility of translaminar fixation.