

Method for determining the direction of crack propagation following hydraulic formation fracturing involves injecting liquid indicator along with fracturing fluid to identify the direction of crack propagation.