

Method for protecting gates from corrosion and fading, in which a set of special steel profiles with polymer coating resistant to UV rays and moisture is manufactured by bending them on sheet metal bending machines, after which they are used to clad gate frame.