

Method for vibrating transportation of materials involves applying vibrations to a conveyor surface mounted on a base with elastic elements oriented at an angle to the horizon, and limiting the amplitude of the vibrations using buffer vibration isolators. Each elastic element is pressed evenly against the base by means of kinematic links. The clamping force increases as the shear force increases.