

Nozzle for heat and mass transfer device, is inscribed in a straight circular cylinder with open ends and has three side faces evenly spaced in the circumferential direction and separated from one another, connected by longitudinal partitions, such that, in cross-section, the side faces coincide with the sides of a regular hexagon. The side faces and longitudinal partitions are twisted along their length.