

Nozzle for heat and mass transfer device is inscribed within a straight circular cylinder and consists of a set of identical shells with open bases and parallel longitudinal axes. It is formed by four closed shells, each of which is shaped like a rectangular prism with rounded short edges and bases that are twice as long as wide. The shells are arranged in parallel pairs, rotated 90° relative to one another.