

Method for producing gluten-free baked goods includes preparing and measuring out the raw materials, dissolving amylolytic enzymes in water, and preparing a semi-finished hydrolysate product from rice flour. Wherein the dough is prepared using a straight dough method, which envisages mixing all ingredients according to the recipe at the same time, using corn, rice and flax flours in the ratio of 60:20:20.