

Centrifugal separator consists of a rotor with a cylindrical section and a truncated cone section, a base plate with an outlet, and a distribution element. The distribution element is shell-shaped and features a transition section that forms an incline at an angle to the rotor longitudinal axis at the point of the decantate outlet.