

Fiber-optic temperature sensor comprises a perforated housing, a light guide, an input end of which is positioned in front of an optical radiation source, and an output end of which is positioned in front of a photodetector connected to a series-connected amplifier and an analog-to-digital converter. A copper tube is additionally introduced, on which the light guide is mounted in the form of a coil.