

Method for obtaining poppy malt involves washing, disinfecting, soaking, and germinating poppy seeds, followed by drying resulting malt. Plasmochemically activated aqueous solutions with a peroxide concentration of 300-700 mg/L are used as disinfectant and germination stimulant during the seed soaking stage.