

Automated parcel reception device equipped with a communication means with a remote server and comprising a part for receiving and accumulating parcels, a local electronic computing device, a monitor with a user interface, a printing module, and a scanning module. The device comprises a general housing in which the part for receiving and accumulating parcels is arranged, which is configured as modular and comprises at least one section for collecting and accumulating parcels, which includes an electronically controlled retractable receiving compartment equipped with an inclined surface for guiding shipments into an accumulator, which is equipped with a plurality of sensors for determining a degree of fullness thereof.