

Method for the selective determination of ondansetron by a potentiometric method, according to which a potentiometric measurement is carried out using an ion-selective electrode. Wherein said electrode comprises a potential-determining membrane, in which an ion associate of ondansetron bromphenol blue is used as an electrode-active substance and tricresyl phosphate is used as a plasticizer.