

Fixed bridge prosthesis for patients with temporomandibular joint dysfunction consists of artificial crowns connected to form a single structure made of zirconium dioxide using computer-aided milling. The chewing surface of the prosthesis is made with a shape that is identical to the chewing surface of the patient's individually adapted temporary plastic prosthesis.