

Device for hydrodynamic testing of connections in the hollow organs of humans and animals consists of a fluid pressure sensor, a data acquisition unit, a T-fitting, connecting tubes and a medical needle, and a flow pump, which is designed to deliver an unlimited supply of fluid to the test area.