

Abacus has a rectangular frame with rods inserted into its two opposite sides, on each of which beads are strung, upper beads of columns formed in such a manner are separated from lower beads. Each column has 5 upper and 4 lower beads, and a number of the columns in the frame is a multiple of 3.