

Device for separation of microplastics from bottom sediments is designed as an electric sanding machine platform, which is arranged horizontally with a working surface facing upwards and is externally fixed by a bed-box to perform a process of reciprocating rotary motions.