

Method for obtaining alloy by smelting involves 60-minute reduction smelting of oxidized waste containing nickel, chromium, molybdenum, and tungsten, followed by the separation of metal and slag phases. Smelting is carried out in the temperature range of 1773-1823 K. Solid carbon is used as reducing agent in an amount of 3-5% of charge mass.