

The invention relates to the device for manual disassembly of rolling elements, specifically of a roller bearing, that ensures fast, safe and physically manageable disassembly of all rolling elements without damaging them and without damaging the cage, which comprises a stand, which comprises a base which is mounted on a support desk, and a stem on which a table is mounted for placement the disassembled bearing.