

Method for producing buckwheat includes cleaning from impurities, heating the grains, moistening, steaming, low-temperature drying, high-temperature drying, cooling, sorting, and hulling. Wherein, plasma-chemically activated aqueous solutions with a peroxide concentration of 300–700 mg/l are used for moistening.