

Method for constructing hydrotechnical structure complex on channel-type reservoirs to maintain flow in small rivers includes the construction of hydroengineering complex with dam and control structure for managing high water levels, as well as bypass channel for discharging runoff. For the hydraulic connection of the upper and lower reaches of hydroengineering complex, water discharge structure in the form of ladder-type fish passage is installed at the end of bypass channel.