

Method for producing alloying additive involves the reduction smelting of oxidized waste containing nickel, chromium, and molybdenum for 60-70 minutes at temperatures ranging from 1723 to 1773 K, followed by the separation of metal and slag phases. Waste contains aluminum and titanium oxides. Solid carbon is used as reducing agent in an amount of 3-5% by charge weight.