

Method for identifying personal items in hotels, hostels, and dormitories, in which hanging elements of various shapes, materials, and colors are manufactured in advance, after which each item of the same type within sets of personal items is equipped with one of these elements by attaching it to the part of the item designed for hanging, after which items with identical hanging elements are grouped into sets.