

Section of a gas pipeline with a technological insert to avoid hydrate formation consists in placing a technological insert with a microwave electromagnetic emitter located on it in the middle part of the gas pipeline, which connects the throttling valve with the low-temperature separator.