

Method for the selective determination of domperidone using a potentiometric technique, in which an ionic associate of domperidone-eosinate is used as the electroactive substance forming the basis of the potential-determining membrane of the ion-selective electrode, and dibutyl phthalate is used as a plasticizer.