

Method for the selective potentiometric determination of mecoprop, in which a sensor is used to perform a potentiometric measurement. The sensor contains a membrane in which an ionic complex of mecoprop fuchsin is used as the active electrode material and dibutyl phthalate is used as the plasticizer.