

Training device for practicing techniques for working with hand fire nozzles contains an easily assembled frame and a water tank that is installed and secured within it with the possibility of further movement in horizontal and inclined planes under the action of water jets from the hand fire nozzles.