

Nasal speculum for septoplasty contains two handles connected by a spring and a lock, which end in solid jaws curved forward at an obtuse angle in the frontal plane. On the right handle, between the lock and the jaw, there is a hook-shaped stopper directed perpendicularly to the side.