

Metal garden bed consists of two long sides and two short sides. The long and short sides are connected to each other at the ends with pegs using bent tabs. Metal garden bed additionally includes posts with slots, attached to the long sides at the center using rivets, and lower and middle crossbars with brackets that connect the respective long sides and posts in the horizontal plane.