

Method for studying corrosion of reinforcing bars in concrete involves loading the test specimens. The specimens consist of reinforced concrete or reinforced cement rings with an inner conical surface, fitted with conical reinforced concrete cores designed to create and maintain stress in the reinforcing bars by being pressed into them.