

Method for obtaining semiconductor artificial substrates comprises first obtaining intermediate semiconductor layer on surface of semiconductor substrate, in which elastic mismatch stresses are relaxed, and then growing low-defect semiconductor layer on it, differing in lattice parameter and chemical composition from semiconductor substrate, in a single technological process. Intermediate semiconductor layer is obtained from the same material as low-defect semiconductor layer, and is a lattice layer.