

Method for producing dietary supplement for maintaining the acid-base balance of gastric juice, in which calcium carbonate, magnesium carbonate, magnesium stearate, white crystalline sugar, corn starch, and a food flavoring are mixed, granulated, and pressed into tablets. During the mixing stage, arabic gum and citric acid are additionally added to dietary supplement.