

Method of controlling a lifting device is carried out by giving commands from the remote control and transmitting commands on deterministic radio frequencies to the executing device. The control signal is given using a deterministic digital Wi-Fi communication protocol by pressing icons on a phone/tablet serving as a remote control, on which the appropriate software is installed, and one or more such remote control are used for one lifting device.