

Clamps used to secure specimens during adhesion strength testing consist of two specimen-holding assemblies connected to holders designed to be mounted on the test rig's crossbars. Hinge heads are installed between the specimen-holding assemblies and the holders.