

Zero-gravity building structure contains spherical housing that houses vacuum chamber with internal mirrored surfaces, designed with the possibility of being filled with highly concentrated light from light station through vacuum channel, and with external cooling chambers and at least one interior compartment with at least one entrance opening.