

Design of the protective packaging for rolled metal products includes at least one outer and one inner protective packaging elements, which are designed to be installed on the coil in their operational configuration. The outer protective packaging element consists of a continuous assembly of an outer shell and an outer protective packaging sheet, while the inner protective packaging element consists of a continuous assembly of an inner shell and an inner protective packaging sheet. In addition, the design includes a protective disc and packaging paper.