

Cassette-type loading device consists of a housing that is mounted on the moving table of a lathe, a removable cassette containing workpieces that is secured by a special plate, a guide rod with a piston, and a clamping spring.