

Method for establishing organic energy plantations of willow of the genus Salix involves sowing the planting material in strips, with two rows with a row spacing of 1.4 m, a spacing of 0.7 m between rows within a strip, and a spacing of 0.6 m between plants within a row. Wherein, one-year-old planting material with an undamaged root system is used to allow for an extended planting period in both fall and spring.