

Open wagon consists of a crew compartment module, includes two two-axle bogies, an automatic coupler module, a braking equipment module, a frame module, and a body module, which contains two side walls and two end walls featuring cladding and a frame consisting of upper and lower stringers. The cladding on the side and end walls of the body module is made of a composite material with an adapted perforated geometry.