

Device for monitoring and adjusting the power parameters of generator voltages when they are connected to a common load has been designed in accordance with a mathematical model of the form

