

Method for corn malt production includes washing, disinfecting, soaking, and germinating corn kernels, followed by drying malt. Plasmochemically activated aqueous solutions with a peroxide concentration of 350-750 mg/L are used as disinfectant and germination stimulant during the soaking stage of grain.