

Vertical vibrating magnetic separator consists of a feeding device, a housing on which the excitation motors are mounted, a magnetic system, and a conveyor for transporting finished separation products. The working body is spiral-shaped, with an angle of inclination of the working surface smaller than the natural angle of repose of the iron-containing material.