

Bohomolov apparatus for determining coefficients of sliding friction includes friction surface designed with the possibility of adjusting and locking the angle of inclination. Friction surface has horizontal plane at the bottom and is equipped with device for measuring the sliding distance of test particle along it, which is used to determine the coefficient of sliding friction.