

Drip irrigation system for sloping lands consists of an irrigation source, a water intake structure, a pressure pipeline, a distribution pipeline and irrigation pipelines connected to it, water outlets connected to shut-off and control valves. Inserts in the form of flexible elbows are installed at regular intervals along the irrigation pipeline and secured in a vertical plane to support risers. Drip emitters are located at the uppermost point of each flexible elbow.