

Built-in civil defense structure for existing and new buildings in the form of inter-story rigid cores, consisting of structural elements such as thickened reinforced concrete walls and floors, and connections between them in the form of reinforced concrete stiffening elements.