

Detachable abutment for single-stage implant placement with a head and a lower section with external threads, where the detachable abutment consists of a nut and a lower section. The lower section has a vertical protrusion with external threads onto which the nut is screwed, in addition, the vertical protrusion has a through-hole designed to allow the lower section of the implant to be inserted until it abuts against the implant head.