

Fiber optic strain gauge consists of a primary fiber, a secondary fiber, a common protective sheath, and rigid supports for mounting on the object to be tested. The secondary fiber is coaxial with the primary fiber, one end of which contains a reflective layer, and the other end is connected to a bi-glass thermally compensating fiber.