

Abacus contains a rectangular frame with spokes inserted into its two opposite sides, each of which is strung with beads. The upper beads of the columns thus formed are separated from the lower beads by a separator. The distance from the separator to the upper beads and from the separator to the lower beads is 10-15 mm. The number of columns in the frame is a multiple of 3.