

Method for manufacturing three-dimensional water decals for nail decoration using UV printing technology involves applying an image to a base using drip UV printing. A thin, transparent, elastic film made from cornstarch is applied to a paper backing with a water-soluble adhesive layer. The decals' three-dimensional effect is created by applying multiple layers of white UV ink, followed by a colored layer.