

Multifunctional food container features a cylindrical body consisting of two compartments designed to hold food and waste, separated by a horizontal divider. These compartments are equipped with lids. The food compartment is additionally equipped with a removable vertical divider that can be used to divide the compartment into two separate sections for storing different types of food. The lid of the food compartment features a dispensing opening and is designed to rotate relative to the body, allowing selective access to the respective sections of the food compartment.