

Method for determining the corrosion rate of a piece of equipment of a urea synthesis plant, the method comprises the provision of electrodes including a working electrode immersed in an aqueous solution containing ammonium carbamate, the method further comprises the determination of polarization data of the working electrode and the determination of the corrosion rate of said piece of equipment based on said polarization data.